We now live in a post-modern world flooded with information and neo-capitalistic injunctions of materialism and consumerism. We feel hindered in our relationship with time and pressured to control our outer lives as well as our inner emotions and thoughts. It is increasingly difficult to trust natural psychic processes, to relate to our inner world, and to find meaning in our lives. Postmodern generations feel that something is missing in their struggle to experience Soul, and as a result new psychological pathologies are emerging on an individual and collective level. This presentation will explore how the approach developed by C.G. Jung is particularly relevant today in responding to contemporary psychological quandaries and the search for Soul and meaning.

About the speaker

Brigit Soubrouillard, Ph.D. is a clinical psychologist based in France. She holds a doctorate in Clinical Psychology from the Pacifica Graduate Institute in California. She subsequently studied in Zurich and graduated from the double Adult and Child program in 1996. She has worked in private practice for over 30 years with patients from many cultures, and has also a long experience in a child psychiatry clinic. She has been a supervisor and senior analyst for 20 years teaching and lecturing in a number of Jungian institutes in Europe and outside Europe.

She was the President of the French Jungian Society, and is now serving on the Executive Committee of the IAAP. She is the Liaison Person for the Hong Kong Developing Group.

She is particularly interested in art and in all forms of work with images. Her entry on 'images' in the IAAP website can be accessed with the following link: <https://iaap.org/image/>
